Italy is aroused over the killing of grandsons of Garibaldi, volunteers with the allies, and Italy is ready to take the field with a million men.

The British have captured the principal town on the coast of German East Africa, the capital of the colony, disabling all German vessels in the harbor.

Ferdinand Wildermann, of New York, is being prosecuted on a charge of making false returns in the invoices of imported Bibles, prayer books and hymn books.

The supreme court Tuesday affirmed the $252,000 judgment, awarded by the New York federal courts to the D. E. Loewen Company, Danbury, Conn., haters, against 186 members of the United Hatters Union, etc., the Sherman law as damages resulting from a boycott.

Clarksville has lost no time in seeking to take advantage of the attempt of the city council of Hopkinsville to levy a license tax of 25 cents per hoghead on tobacco. The Leaf-Chronicle has this to say:

"Encouraging news comes from Kentucky growers, who seem to be turning to this market to sell their tobacco. They argue that the recent act of the Hopkinsville City Council, in assessing a special tax on tobacco prizes, is detrimental to the producer, for the reason that the manufacturers of tobacco in America and Europe figure this additional assessment as part cost of the tobacco, consequently it comes off the price paid farmers for their product. This new move would not, perhaps, be of so much concern to the farmers in normal times, but at a time when the war has so materially affected the price of tobacco, they feel that they should be free from any tax in marketing their crops, as the difference between selling on a taxed market and one untaxed, goes far toward paying the fixed expenses they are put to in reaching market. Some years ago a move was started in Clarksville to levy a special tax on our snuff factories, but our business interests protested on the ground that it would be harmful to the tobacco growers as well as the laborers here and the Board of Aldermen wisely dropped the matter, which action was thoroughly in line with the policy of the Clarksville market, to offer the farmers a free open sales place."

The business men of Hopkinsville protested vigorously against the proposed ordinance referred to above, but had less influence apparently with their council than the business men of Clarksville had with their Board of Aldermen. No attempt, so far as known, has yet been made to enforce the obnoxious measure, the legality of which has not yet been passed upon. The Leaf-Chronicle has no right to assume that the action taken by the council indicates an unfriendly attitude of the people of Hopkinsville towards the tobacco market. The people have already voted to have any more councils.

FULT FRENCH PASSES AWAY

Leader of Faction Once At War With Eversoles Dead At Winchester.

MIGHTY MAN IN HIS DAY.

Regarded For Years As Chief In Mountain Feud—Close Friend of Hargis.

Winchester, Ky., Jan. 6.—B. Fulton French, leader of the faction which bore his name in the old French-Eversole feud in Perry county, but for years a well-to-do citizen of Winchester, died here last night at 8-40 o'clock after an illness which made it impossible for him to lie down, his trouble being asthma and complications.

French is survived by his wife, a son, Marion, of Mt. Sterling, who was killed at Jackson by his own son, Beach, and was alleged to have assisted the Breathitt feud leader by attempting to spirit away a witness in the trial of Hargis in the damage suit brought by Mrs. James B. Marcum against Hargis and many others for the murder of her husband. They were acquitted on the criminal charge, but a jury gave Mrs. Marcum damages.

HALY FOR GOVERNOR

Politician, Once a Frankfort Newsboy, May Shy Hat Into Ring.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 6.—An interesting development of Kentucky politics is that Percy Haly, who has helped others become Governor of Kentucky, may seek to become Governor himself.

Haly's friends are urging him to become a candidate in the August primary for the Democratic nomination and he is known to be considering the proposition.

Though Haly is but thirty-eight years old he has been a power in Kentucky politics for fifteen years. A native of Frankfort, he became interested in politics and politicians when he was selling papers in Frankfort and he gained the acquaintance of the political leaders and learned the ways of politics as a child.

When Goebel made his memorable and tragic race for Governor Haly was just coming to the front. As the friend of Goebel and afterward as the friend of Beckham he was given his opportunity to show what he could do and he made good from the first.

Haly has been Beckham's chief champion and he has never faltered in his devotion to the Senator-elect.

Haly's powers as an organizer are admitted by all and in the many years that he has been conducting campaigns in the state he has gained an unrivaled insight into political conditions all through Kentucky.

If Haly makes the race his friends say it will be on a constructive programme to get the state out of debt and remodel the school system.

RUSSIANS WIN TWO GREAT VICTORIES

Entire Army Corps of Turks is Captured in Battle in Caucasus and Czar's Men Are in Full Pursuit of Foes.

THE AUSTRIANS ALSO SUFFER DEFEAT.

Russians Gain Control of Carpathian Pass and Shut Off Fuel Supply From Austro-German Forces—French Advance in Alsace.

Petrograd, Jan. 6.—It is officially announced that the Russian troops have gained a decisive victory at Sari Kamysh. The entire army ninth army corps of the Turks was captured.

The following report received from the Russian headquarters in the Caucasus was made public tonight: "Last night our troops won a complete victory over the Turks at Sari Kamysh. We have beaten two Turkish army corps and made the entire ninth Turkish army corps, including its commander and three division commanders, prisoners."

"Small bodies of Turkish troops which succeeded in escaping were rigorously pursued and destroyed."

"We continue pursuit of the other parts of the Turkish forces, which are in full retreat."

London, Jan. 6.—Two of the three Turkish columns which last week invaded the Russian Caucasus have met with disaster, and the troops not killed or captured are in disorderly retreat. The column which took Ardahan two days ago has been driven out of that town, according to Petrograd official dispatches, and is almost surrounded by the Russians, who hold the main roads. Another column, which crossed the frontier near Sari Kamysh, on the road to Kars, has suffered even worse defeat, one of the two army corps which composed it being captured in its entirety.

The Russians also report another victory over the Austrians in the Uzok pass of the Carpathians. Emperor Francis Joseph's army in this region is declared to be in full retreat in a mountain pass deep in snow, with Russian cavalry attacking its flank and rear.

By forcing this pass, the Russians gain control of some of the most valuable oil fields in Austria, and thus shut off another source of fuel supplies, which the Austro-German armies are said to so much need.

While forcing back the Turks and Austrians, the Russian troops are holding the line of the Mazurian lakes in East Prussia; are fighting strenuously to withstand the German offensive in North Poland; are advancing towards Cracow, and have crossed Bukovina, which is now virtually in their possession.

In North Poland, where Russia is confronted with the most serious task, the weather is proving a useful ally. The Germans, according to their accounts, are making only slow progress with their offensive operations.

Military men look for bigger events between the lower Vistula and the East Prussian frontier. The Russians hold the greater part of the intervening territory and, unless engaged, when the river freezes, would fall on the German flank south of the river. It is believed here therefore that the Germans plan a movement from Thorn and East Prussia to prevent this action. The fighting would take place in the open.

Except at two extreme wings on the Belgian coast and in upper Alsace, where the allies have gained some ground, fighting on the western front has been done by sappers, miners and artillery. Only at isolated points has the infantry been given its opportunity. A few hundred yards have been gained by the allies among the Dunes of Flanders.

Great interest attaches to French operations in upper Alsace. The capture of Steinbach was accomplished after almost superhuman efforts. Now the French are attempting to force their way through to Cernay (Sennheim), the possession of which would open the door to Mulhausen.

One of the lessons the war has taught Russia is that the port of Archangel, its only large seaport on the north coast and the most northerly point in the railway system of Europe, can be kept open most of the winter with the aid of ice breakers. Archangel generally is frozen over for months, but it has been kept open thus far.

ENTERS FOR GOVERNOR

J. W. Newman, of Versailles, Commissioner of Agriculture, Announces Candidacy.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 6.—J. W. Newman, of Versailles, Ky., present commissioner of agriculture, announced himself a candidate for the democratic gubernatorial nomination last night. State-wide prohibition is one of the planks in his platform. His announcement follows the rumor that General Percy Haly, of Frankfort, and manager of United States Senator-elect Beckham's campaign in the recent election, would be a candidate. Haly at this time declines to confirm or deny the story of his candidacy.

Fire In Murray.

Murray, Ky., Jan. 6.—The home of Joseph Smith in the Linn addition of this city, was destroyed by fire late Monday afternoon. The home, with its contents, with the exception of a few small pieces of furniture, was a total loss. No insurance. The Smith family was away from home, and when the fire was discovered neighbors had to break the front door to effect an entrance.

BOLD THEFT OF A MULE

Stolen In Broad Daylight on The Principal Street of The City.

At 1:30 p. m. Tuesday, Walter Southern, a reputable colored man, who lives near Brent's Shop, hitched his mule attached to a buggy to a pole near the First National Bank and went into a store. When he came out the mule and buggy were gone. Alex Dade, colored, recalled afterwards that he saw a negro get in the buggy and drive off but paid no especial attention to the circumstances, not knowing whose outfit it was.

Southern at once placed the matter in the hands of Chief Roper, but no word has been received from the missing property.

The buggy is a piano-box top buggy from which the top has been removed. The mule is a mouse-colored mare mule, black stripe down back, gear-mark on right hip, fair order, medium size. Right shaft of buggy has been broken and repaired.

MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSION

Destroys a Corn Shredder In Operation on Farm of M. F. Winfree.

FORTUNATELY NO LIVES LOST

Evidently a Stick of Dynamite Had Been Placed In The Fodder.

A corn shredder on the farm of M. F. Winfree, near Casky, was destroyed by an explosion Tuesday. The machine had been in operation for several hours and had slowed down to quit work when the explosion occurred. The hands about the machine had withdrawn some distance, Mr. Winfree himself being 15 or 20 feet from the shredder. A small lot of corn stalks left on the feeder was being jostled into the shredder by the movements of the machinery, when all of a sudden the explosion occurred, presumably a stick of dynamite. The machine was utterly demolished, pieces being scattered over a radius of two acres. Almost by a miracle, no one was hurt. The engine 65 feet away was not injured.

There is an air of mystery about the affair. Mr. Winfree had no explosives about the farm. He is confident it had been placed in the fodder. The shredder was an old one and was worth about $100.

A colored man had been feeding the machine and several hands had been assisting in its operation. An explosion a little earlier would surely have caused a loss of life to some of them.

MEETING IS CALLED

Of The Executive Committee Named At Monday's Tobacco Meeting.

Whereas, at a meeting of the Tobacco Growers of Christian county, held at the Court House in Hopkinsville on Monday, Jan. 4th, 1915, the following named gentlemen, to wit:—W. L. Gore, J. A. McKerzie, W. L. Cude, L. R. Davis, W. T. Dugherly, G. L. Campbell, Birkdale Caldwell, L. L. Leavell, Allen Owen, Alex Fritz, C. W. White, Frank P. Pool, J. J. Stevenson and W. T. Fowler, were appointed an executive committee to devise ways and means of meeting the unusual situation facing the tobacco growers, in the selling of their 1914 crop. Said committee is called to meet at the Avalon, in Hopkinsville, Saturday, Jan. 9th, 1915, at 1:30 p. m.

This is a matter of vital importance not only to the tobacco growers but every citizen of Christian county and the situation can only be saved by prompt action and every member of said committee is urged to be present.

PRICES ARE PICKING UP

Receipts Are Still Light But Show a Gradual Increase.

FAT TYPES IN DEMAND

One Logan Crop Sells at $10.15 And One Small Lot at $12.50.

The tobacco sales are considerably heavier this week than last and there is an upward tendency on the better grades that are in demand.

A truck lot was sold at the Hancock house yesterday at $12.50.

West & Co. sold a Logan county crop at $10.15 round.

Tom C. Jones sold a crop of 14,000 pounds at $9.50 for leaf, $5.00 for lugs and $2.65 for trash.

The entire sale of 23,000 pounds at Cooper's loose floor Tuesday averaged $7.32½.

The demand is active for medium length snuff tobacco in good order, with body and well fired. The fat types, tobacco that got fully ripe and has been well handled, are being eagerly sought and prices are generally satisfactory. The loose floor sales are going ahead as usual, but receipts were light last week, the total being 73,000 pounds. The receipts are expected to be heavy by next week, following the better weather conditions.

120 BRIDES FROM JAPAN

Girls Come From Orient to Men They Married But Have Never Seen.

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—Seventy picture brides from Japan arrived here Monday to meet husbands they have never seen. Fifty more had arrived within the week. Until the husbands claim them the brides are being housed at the United States detention station.

In the eyes of the Japanese law the brides have been married. There has been an exchange of photographs, an approval by the heads of the two contracting families and a formal declaration of intention.

The brides come tagged and numbered, are correctly awarded to their right husbands and then usually are taken in hand by the Japanese association, which escorts them to the marriage license bureau, after which a religious service is held.

The Sick.

Frank Mitchell, shot near Gracey, bids fair to recover. As soon as he is able to be moved, it is probable that he will be brought to the Stuart Hospital here. At the time he was shot four of Mr. Mitchell's children were sick in bed.

Burned to Death.

Elizabeth, Ky., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Gaither, an aged woman and member of one of Hardin county's prominent families, was burned to death at her home near here. It is supposed she fell from her chair while asleep and that her clothing caught fire from the grate.

Invention of Italian Engineer is Likely Soon to Be Put Into General Use.

"Come down and see the fish," may be a greeting this summer at some seaside resorts. Several watering places are negotiating for the installation of the kiosk-hydro, a new invention, which enables sightseers to descend into the sea.

The kiosk-hydro, which is the invention of an Italian engineer, consists of a circular steel observation chamber in the walls of which are double water-tight windows. Above these windows are electric lamps of 10,000 candle power, fitted with re-flectors and capable, it is claimed, of projecting light a distance of 1,500 feet when the water is clear.

The chamber has a sloping roof,
which narrows into a steel tube, through which two staircases, one for descent and the other for ascent, lead to the water level. The upper part of the kiosk-hydro may either take the form of a floating kiosk, rising and falling with the tide, and connected with a pier by a gangway, or it may be part of the pier itself, with the observation chamber suspended just above the bed of the sea.

Glass half an inch thick is used for the windows, and the steel shell is of the same thickness.

SELDOM IS TRUE REFLECTION

Person We See Depends on What Mirror We Look into, and Not All Are Complimentary.

"Here," said Mrs. Spastick, "is something that I have always said myself and now it is in the newspaper! One seldom sees one's true reflection in a mirror!"

"Now there is a real optimist!" observed Swastick. "I have always wanted to think that! Every time I have looked at myself in a mirror during all these years of shaving and parting my golden locks and trying on new hats and suits, I have had a sad, wistful feeling on beholding my image.
I never knew what I sighed for!"

"All this time I have been worrying about the forbidding scowl that haunts my features through no connivance on my part, about the scared look of my ears and the Ulsterish disposition of my topknot."

"Now, it was not Apollo-like beauty that I craved; it was only the comforting knowledge that I didn't really look like my reflection in the glass."

"One does not look the same in all mirrors," said Mrs. Swastick thoughtfully. "There are some glasses that make a person look beautiful. I would like to think that they are somewhere near right, anyway."

"Will," said Swastick, "I never saw a mirror that flattered me as much as others knock me. There is a mirror in the elevator that gives me a rather refined look, but most of them mock me in a very rude and impolite manner, caricature me and burlesque me."

"Under this horrid arrangement I should think that ladies dressing for a ball would all want to go over to the ballroom to dress by the ballroom mirrors, so they could know exactly how they were going to look at the ball."

"It seems a shame for a woman to dress by her home mirror, only to find when she gets to the ballroom that she looks entirely different."

"But," contended Mrs. Swastick, "it isn't how she will look to herself in the ballroom mirror that bothers her.
It is how she will look to the rest of the people at the ball. But if a woman can't tell how she looks to other people by looking at herself in a mirror, how is she ever going to know? It is very unsatisfactory for a woman never to be able to know exactly how she looks."

"I suppose it would be better to know the worst," murmured Swastick.

Ears on Their Legs.

David Fairchild, who has bunted the world over for plans of economic value and introduced them into this country, has communicated some interesting facts about insects to our National Geographic society, which has in turn given them to the public.
He says the champion aeronaut is the king grasshopper, which has the ability to jump one hundred times its length and can sail for a thousand miles before the wind. The cricket is described as a powerful singer, its shrill note sometimes being heard a mile away. The males alone are musical, and the females listen to their melodious wooings with ears which are on their forelegs. Being so musical, it would hardly be expected that they would be such fighters among themselves as they are, or cannibals, eating each other when there is not enough other food at hand.
The ants are described as communists, because the individual interest is merged in the community. There is a female rights colony. The workers are females, the soldiers are females, the nurses are females, and there is one queen mother for them all, who lays all the eggs for the colony. The males are but mates for the young queens.—The Christian Herald.

Arc Light and Echoes.

To improve the acoustic properties of a large hall at the University of Illinois an electric arc light was used to assist the investigators in locating the sources of sound disturbance.

The acoustical properties of the room were wretched at the start, but by a series of experiments within the auditorium itself, following careful studies in the laboratory, the trouble has been, practically, cured.

Echoes were located by means of an alternating current arc light, a beam from which, accompanied by the hissing sound of the arc, was directed to various parts of the room. The paths of the light reflections were traced and verified by the sound.

A complete acoustical survey was thus made of the auditorium, resulting finally in the hanging of curtains and canvases in various parts of the room so as to stop the reverberations.—Engineering Record.

Fire Chief "Made Time."

Fire Chief John Kenion had a rather novel experience in reaching an early morning blaze recently. When four alarms were sounded for a fire at a yacht and engine plant at Morris Heights, in The Bronx, the chief hopped into his red automobile and started for the northern borough. At Lenox avenue and 127th street the engine "went dead." This didn't stop the chief, for he ran to the nearest "L" station and rode to the viaduct at Eighty avenue and 165th street, where he spied a private touring car. After waking up the chauffeur and flashing his badge he jumped in and was whisked up Sedgwick avenue, as he said later, hitting only the big spots, until he reached the fire. The chauffeur admitted it was the fastest trip he had ever driven, and added that his speedometer must have thought it was his birthday.—New York Tribune.

the whole affair, so he followed them."

"Was the girl very fair haired and beautiful?" Dorr managed to ask in an indifferent tone.

"Precisely," responded the clerk, suddenly watching his guest's manner. "If you want to find Mrs. Darnell, maybe the house detective got her address—or the address of the hospital they took the girl to."

Presently, in response to a summons, appeared the detective, who scanned John's somewhat bruised face thoughtfully, saying nothing until the clerk explained that Mr. Dorr wished, if possible, to get into communication with Mrs. Darnell.

"The best I can do is to find the taxi driver for you," he said slowly, still studying John's stalwart figure. "He may be out on the street now. Let's see."

As they passed out the detective continued hesitatingly, "Do you know Mrs. Darnell very well?"

There was that in the man's tone that made John pause before answering. He glanced at the cool, impassive face and caught the glint of the steady eyes. He took a sudden resolution.

"I believe you're really interested in this matter," Dorr said briefly. "Suppose we talk this over before hunting the taxi chauffeur."

"I was merely curious, that's all," was the noncommittal murmur.

"That girl is not her daughter," John continued. "I have reason to believe that it is Miss Ruth Gallon, the heiress to the 'Master Key' mine, whom she is abducting. His passion blazed forth in spite of his self restraint. 'I must find her and save her!'

"Might I ask what relation you are to the young lady?" asked the detective mildly.

John stared at him and then realized the oddity of his actions and words. He briefly explained his position at the mine and his wardship of the heiress. He also went into detail as to what he suspected Wilkerson of, describing him carefully.

"He was one of them, sure enough," agreed the detective. "But young heiresses ain't being kidnapped days like these out of hotels like this."

"I may be mistaken," John assented wearily. "All I know of Mrs. Darnell is from occasional words dropped by Wilkerson. But I suppose we might get a clew as to where they went anyway."

After some search of the long line of taxis they came to one which the detective identified as the one Mrs. Darnell had taken the night before.

"Driver, take us where you did those fares who were in such a hurry last night," the detective ordered.

The chauffeur shook his head. "You can search me for the address," he returned. "There wasn't any."

The driver leaned out from his seat and went on earnestly: "You know how they jumped in and we rolled off. Well, it seemed to me as if it was a case of life and death, according to the woman, and I stepped on the machine and hastened toward the North Pacific hospital, but when we got into Chinatown one of the men halted me and told me to drive just as he said. He got out here in front with me, and when we reached a certain spot they all beat it."

"Can you take us to that spot?"

"I was just wondering to myself whether I could find it," was the response. "But I'll try."

He threw in his clutch and the car left the line and started up the hill toward Call Street. John Dorr leaned back against the cushions with a strange sense of at last in his way toward his goal. He barely heard his companion's murmur. "Evidently they took her into the lower part of Chinatown."

We usually credit the oriental with little or no imagination, pointing to his art, his clothes and his language as evidence. As the fact runs, even the Chinese could not be guilty of imagination more frequently than his white brother on an equal social plane. Sing Wah, or Wah Sing, as he was called, was outwardly a cold, dull, and a Chinese of no account. His father, it was in the

from Singapore to Philadelphia—was not less changeless of expression, nor more tectum than he. Yet in spite of his somber clothes and general air of blank stupidity, Sing Wah was a man of mark, a man with a history replete with adventure and, not too seldom with crime.

If the ordinary criminal could have an office or a store he would quadruple his profits. But the common run of rascals must steal and fly. Their post office address is a figment. They are not at home when opportunity knocks. Sing Wah knew this, and it was his boast that for thirty years any one who wanted him, either day or night, could find him.

So he sat at the back of his little store night after night, blinking through the wooden screen at the various customers who came in to trade or barter. And year after year they came to his door, the pirate and the thief, the smuggler and the robber, and he took his toll of them and passed them on. Whither? Sing Wah never told. And because he did not tell they came back with greater loot and richer booty, and he again passed them through his store to vanish utterly from the haunts of men and the purview of the police.

Among the many hundreds who had availed themselves of Sing Wah's aid was Wilkerson, who, during dark periods of his career, had several times run athwart the barriers of the law and been compelled to seek refuge where he could.

Harry Wilkerson was not a fool. In some ways he was brilliantly endowed. He recognized Sing Wah's superiority to all others in the great game of outwitting the law. He perceived beneath the stolid mask the alert, active, sun-dried mind which was ever vigilant, never forgetful, always intelligently watching the world that passed before his filmed eyes. The Chinese had, as well, acknowledged Wilkerson's adeptness and persistency. In several deals they had been partners in their mutual profit.

"You are a very good fellow, Harry," Sing Wah had told him once as they drank tea in a little room in the rear. "You are a smart man—almost as smart as I am. But you are too hungry. You cannot resist your appetites. Now, I—no made a slight gesture of dislike with his lean brown hand—"I have no appetites."

Wilkerson nodded. "I guess you're right, Sing Wah. You even haven't any pride. You talk plodding English to the tourists and the rest, instead of speaking the perfect English you know."

The dull eyes lit for a moment humorously. "I have always felt that I owed it to Oxford not to flatter my education in a small tradesman's shop, don't you?"

The mention of the Oxonian drawl had been so natural that Wilkerson had slipped his cheeks in delight. Thereafter he had a peculiar pleasure in watching Sing Wah's assumed stolid stupidity, comparing it with what he knew to be the real person behind the dull features.

It was to Wilkerson that the Chinese had first shown the reason for never changing his address, no matter how dark the police might be. "And I have always felt that I owed it to Oxford not to flatter my education in a small tradesman's shop, don't you?"

"I was just wondering to myself whether I could find it," was the response. "But I'll try."

He threw in his clutch and the car left the line and started up the hill toward Call Street. John Dorr leaned back against the cushions with a strange sense of at last in his way toward his goal. He barely heard his companion's murmur. "Evidently they took her into the lower part of Chinatown."

the stake was too great to risk, and she bitterly consented to Wilkerson's hastily outlined plan of hiding Ruth away somewhere in Sing Wah's precincts until they could once more get their plans into working order.

Before she would leave the place she must indeed see Sing Wah himself.

"Will the girl be safe here?" she demanded. The Chinese looked at her flushed and passionate beauty in silence until she repeated her question. Then he said quietly and in his own exquisitely modulated English: "You need have little fear. The servants are honest and discreet. And"—he let his eyes meet hers fully—"I think it is possible that she is safer now than she has been for some time. Good night, madam!"

While Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell had been hurriedly arranging matters with Sing Wah, Drake had gone in search of lodgings nearby. He found them in what had once been a noted hotel, which had fallen into sad decay. It was in the faded rooms he engaged here that the three met to consult on the future.

"The first thing to do is to get hold of those deeds and papers she has in her grip," said Wilkerson. "I wonder you didn't think to get them before Jean."

The woman's eyes lit with dull hatred, but she made no answer. She watched him fuss with the locks of the hand satchel which she had indicated as the one in which Ruth carried her valuables. When it opened and Wilkerson thrust his clutching fingers downward into it Mrs. Darnell leaned forward as if in protest. He paid no attention to her, but continued his search with ever increasing haste. At last he straightened up with an oath so venomous and deadly that even Drake shrank back.

"The deeds aren't here," Wilkerson said thickly. "She's hidden them!"

"But where?"

This question seemed to break Wilkerson's almost steeled intensity of purpose. The question put his whole problem before him in two words—but where? He shifted his eyes from the emptied satchel to the curtained window. Instantly there leaped before him the picture of the truck turning slowly over in the gulch, of the huge billow of smoke, of the little lances of fire that charged through the dry undergrowth as if to preserve to the flames their prey. Was it for this that he was a murderer? The curtain blew inward before some vagrant wind from the bay, and Wilkerson drew back in terror.

"What is it, Harry?" demanded Mrs. Darnell, instantly taking alarm.

"Nothing," he said sullenly. "I was just thinking of something." He turned on Drake. "You've got to do the trick," he went on.

"How's that?" demanded the young man.

Wilkerson eagerly formulated his plan, ticking off the points on the tips of his quivering fingers.

"First you're Everett, turned up at last. You find her—"

"In Chinatown?" sneered Drake.

"You can easily gain her confidence and get hold of the papers, and maybe—"

Drake laughed ugly. "I look like the kind of joker who would dress up as a banker and then proceed to renew my client's acquaintance in a Chinese joint. How am I supposed to know she's there? I tell you, Wilkerson, that you can't travel straight, even when it pays you. Why in God's name you ever took that girl to that place of Sing Wah's is beyond my comprehension. Any place would have been better. Now you have put the heads of all of us in a noose. You know what people will say when—"

"They'll say nothing," said Wilkerson furiously, and he proceeded once more to argue that Drake could easily continue to impersonate Everett and in that guise carry their scheme to its profitable conclusion. In spite of his eagerness and sophistry he was unable to move either Drake or Mrs. Darnell from their attitude of frightened contempt. At last Drake agreed to do his best to make Ruth trust him.

"But I don't like this impersonation business," he said firmly. "I might go to a hotel and hand in my broker's card and ask for an interview, but I haven't lost my senses."

"Well," growled Wilkerson, "just see to it that you worm out of her where those papers are."

CHAPTER XII.

Crossed Wires.

THUS it happened that just when Drake entered Sing Wah's unpretentious doorway the taxi with the hotel detective and John Dorr drew up in a side street and stopped.

"It was here they left me," said the chauffeur sulkily.

The detective and John got out and stared about them. They were in the lower part of Chinatown, a single tier of blocks that stretched beyond the bounds toward the bay—not in the quarter, but of it.

"Which way did they take the girl?" said the practical detective.

The driver led them around the corner and up an alleyway. He pointed to Sing Wah's door. "I think they went in there," he muttered.

"Ah!" said the detective thoughtfully. "When I was on the police force I used to know that Chinaman. He's the smoothest rascal in America, bar none."

John gritted his teeth in helpless rage. "And she's in that fiend's foul clutches," he growled aloud.

At this moment a policeman came along and arrested John's companion familiarly. In a few words the case was explained to him.

"You won't find anything, of course," the officer remarked. "But just for satisfaction let's have a look see and a chin-chin with Sing Wah."

They entered the shop just as a Chinese was closing a panel door after Drake, who had come to make his promised attempt to win Ruth's confidence. Sing Wah was nowhere to be seen.

After some futile parley with the Chinese, whose ignorance was complete in every detail, the two officers agreed that they were wasting time.

"Old Sing's the boy to see," said the house detective. "Let's wait awhile."

Now, Sing Wah had pondered the affair during the night, and the more he thought over having a lovely white girl in the cylindrical room the less he liked it. It was doubly dangerous. Courts might be lenient with the smuggler and the go-between. Sing Wah knew that if even a suspicion got abroad that a young white woman was imprisoned in his quarters a ravening mob would tear his place stick from stone and hang him without trial. He was determined to get the girl away immediately. So he was unfeignedly glad to see Drake.

Drake attempted to explain what Wilkerson wanted, but the Chinese cut him short.

"Harry is insane," he said quietly. "He is mad over that woman. I have done all I can. You must get her out of here."

"But how?" demanded Drake. "She doesn't know me very well, and she'll scream her head off, and I'll be arrested, and we'll all be in a mess."

Sing Wah nodded thoughtfully. Then he looked up and listened to the low words of one of his clerks. Dismissing him with a slight grunt, he turned to Drake.

"There's not much time," he said softly. "They are on the trail already."

"Who?"

"The police." He motioned Drake to a chair in the little alcove, where they stood and went on: "Stay here a moment. I will see for myself." He pulled a lever, and the room swung around till the door was opposite him.

With long, slender fingers he slipped back the panel and vanished.

Ruth lay on a couch, open eyed and white faced. Beside her a richly dressed Chinese woman crouched, whispering soothingly. At sight of Sing Wah Drake suddenly sat upright in silent horror.

"I beg your pardon, miss," Sing said in his silkiest English. "I have come to take you back to your friends outside."

The girl shrank back. "No, no, no!" she moaned. "They are not my friends."

"Surely Harry Wilkerson"—Sing suggested craftily, to see how the land lay.

"Wilkerson!" she whispered. "Is he—was he here?"

Her tone conveyed all that he wanted to know. He motioned to the woman to leave and when she was gone pulled a cord, which let down a light rope ladder.

"I am sorry, madam," he said quietly, "but I shall have to ask you to climb up this. It is the only safe way out." He laid one hand gently on her arm.

Now, Ruth was California bred, with all the prejudices for and against the Chinaman. She screamed. At that instant there was a crash of a shattered door in the distance and the sound of men talking in excited tones.

"You must come," said Sing Wah. "I will take you to a place of safety. All I ask of you is to follow me and be silent."

His earnestness was unmistakable, and Ruth yielded. A moment later they both stood on a small landing place above the cylindrical room. Sing Wah carefully drew up the ladder and coiled it again on the wooden trigger that had released it. Then he led the way down a dark passage to stairs lit by a mere glimmer of gas. Ruth drew back, but he indicated that she must go on. Even as she obeyed his imperious gesture there came out the muffled clatter of revolver shots. Then again came the sound of doors yielding to violence and the shouts of wrathful men.

under low arches till she felt a sudden cool, salt breath on her face. At her feet she saw the glimmer of water and a boat riding to a long palat. Quickly and silently Sing Wah drew the little craft alongside and motioned to her to get in.

By this time the tumult had died down to a mere muttering of shots with an occasional yell, muffled by walls and the distance. She stared fearfully about her, at the great arches of dripping brick overhead, at the little landing under foot, at the dark vista of the tunnel through which the water streamed in a swishing tide. She drew back and let her voice out in one long, forlorn scream, the pent up agony of many hours, her final call for help against the dark powers that had seized upon her.

With swift strength Sing Wah reached out his slawey arms, raised her up and seated her in the stern of the boat. A moment later he had cast off the painter and shipped the oars. The boat slipped silently away on the current into the murk.

After some talk between the officers John Dorr was informed that if he liked they would enter Sing Wah's and make a thorough search.

"Not that I think we'll find anything or anybody," said one of the policemen, "but it never does any harm to take a look-see through Sing Wah's, and the lieutenant is coming down now to take charge."

A moment later that officer arrived, and John Dorr made his tale as convincing as possible. The lieutenant seemed dubious.

"It isn't like the old habit to run his head into danger that way," he insisted. "I think you are on the wrong trail. Who did you say was the man who did all this?"

"Wilkerson! Harry Wilkerson," John answered bitterly.

"Wilkerson?" repeated the lieutenant. "That puts another color on the matter. Wilkerson and Sing Wah used to be pals. This'll bear looking into. Come on, men!"

With wonderful quickness the officer disposed his men so that every known exit was guarded. Then he motioned to John to follow him and went bold up to the shop door and entered.

Followed again a little party with a Chinese who professed to know a language but his own. The lieutenant's quick ear caught in sound of something moving directly behind the impassive clerk. Briskly he aside he snatched in the door in the partition and strode into the hallway beyond. John Dorr was close at his heels.

The next few moments were to live long in John's memory as the strangest of his life.

"Be careful!" warned the officer. "The rascals may start shooting!"

Even as the spy there was a ruddy flash down the dark alleyway, and Dorr staggered back.

"Only my arm," he muttered.

"Come on! Don't give 'em another chance at us here! Rush!"

An instant later they stood in the cylindrical room. John stared at him, but the lieutenant merely remarked: "This room was built merely for tourists' consumption. Let me see that arm of yours!"

Examination proved the wound to be slight. They glanced up from it to see the doorway swing slowly away as the room revolved.

"Trapped by smoke!" said the lieutenant. He laid a warning hand on Dorr's arm. "Keep quiet. We've lost our direction and we must wait a moment till we discover where that doorway is."

So they stood hesitant for a few seconds. A panel slipped open in the wall and a woman's face appeared for an instant. Swift as the China woman was, the police officer was a quicker he plunged through the shallow panel, with Dorr at his shoulder.

Once through they paused in the semidarkness to orientate themselves. Finally the lieutenant stepped forward. "This way," he said. "I hear voices."

At that very moment there came up to them an unearthly scream, a shriek of pure terror.

"Ruth!" John yelled, and he and the officer both plunged forward.

Instead of the firm footing they expected empty air received them. Twenty feet below they struck the water.

Spitting and swearing, the policeman helped Dorr to a little ledge that ran alongside the tunnel.

"The miserable Chink dropped us into the big sewer," he gasped. "It runs into the bay just a little ways on. We'll have to swim for it, partner."

Dorr looked down at his arm and shook his head. "Isn't that a bunt over there?" he demanded, pointing into the shadow.

"Blamed if it ain't," said the lieutenant, much relieved. "We'll soon be out of here."

In spite of his wound Dorr insisted on rowing, and the officer philosophically allowed him to, seating himself gingerly in the stern of the little craft and fending it off the brick walls of the tunnel with his hands as the swift current drew them onward.

To John the whole affair seemed like a dream. He saw the great dripping arches sliding past overhead to join the long vista of arches that bridged the glistening water which splashed gently along to the call of the tide; he saw the dark bulk of the lieutenant in the stern; he felt the pain of his wound; he still heard Ruth's wild call for help. But it was all unrelated, as if each were a fact by itself. Isolated. He struggled to gather his senses together.

"Look out!" shouted the policeman suddenly as the great half cylinder curved sharply and a blast of fresh air struck them. "We'll be swept out into the bay! Keep the boat trim!"

Awakened by this warning, John devoted himself to his oars and a half moment later steered their little craft out under the piles of a wharf.

"Where to now?" he demanded dully. The lieutenant pointed a thick forefinger toward another small boat a few rods away. "There is Sing Wah now, by smoke!" he exclaimed.

John Dorr glanced around. He first saw the impassive visage of the Chinese and then the figure crouched in the stern sheets. It was Ruth! He raised his voice in a triumphant yell. Hearing that call from her mate, the girl roused herself and cried back across the water: "John! John!"

At this point the police officer took part with a stern order to Sing Wah to stop rowing and surrender. He emphasized this command by covering the Chinese with his revolver.

Sing Wah was of no mind to be caught in this way. With a dexterous sweep of the oars he swirled his little skiff around so that Ruth was between him and the other boat, and he never ceased to pull doggedly away.

"You've got to row, son," said the lieutenant grimly. "Mr. Sing Wah doesn't intend to be caught so easily. I don't shoot for fear of hitting the girl."

John saw the reasonableness of this and bent to his oars without regard to his wound. The boat surged through the water after the other.

With a good lead of a hundred yards Sing Wah stood a fair show of gaining his object—a landing under some wharf and a quiet escape. He knew that if he were to fall into the hands of the police under the present circumstances he would be treated mercilessly. He rowed furiously.

But the Chinese had long since ceased active life, and his muscles were soft. John Dorr steadily gained on him. Slowly he crept up, foot by foot, inch by inch, his eyes fixed on the steady figure of the officer in the stern.

At last he caught encouragement from the policeman's face. He heaved the skiff fairly out of the water, grasped the stern of the other boat and before the Chinese could clear himself for a leap overboard was upon him.

Now, Sing Wah was a true Oriental. It showed in his swift drawing of a knife and a swifter slash at John Dorr's arm. But he was too late. With an inarticulate roar of rage John flung the knife overboard and then flung its owner after it.

Sing Wah went and swimming away toward the shelter of a nearby wharf. John strode back to where Ruth lay half insensible and picked her up in his arms.

"Honey! Honey!" he murmured. "You're safe with me."

Very slowly she opened her eyes and gazed long and searchingly into his face. It was indeed true that she was safe. She laid her head on his shoulder in perfect confidence that all was well. The police lieutenant stepped into the boat and took the oars.

"It's not like Sing Wah to be doing such tricks," he argued to himself. "I believe that Harry Wilkerson is back of this. I'll just keep an eye out for Mr. Wilkerson."

The lieutenant contemplated his dripping uniform with a frown, which softened when he looked up at the two lovers. He pulled more strongly for the landing.

100 YEARS AGO

The Battle of New Orleans, January 8, 1815.

However much the battle of New Orleans may have reflected glory on American arms, and it flattered our political history by bringing forward the picturesque and forceful personality of "Old Hickory" it will always be regretted; for it occurred fifteen days after the signing of the treaty of peace at Ghent.—On December 24, 1814. The telegraph had not been invented, and the sailing vessel that bore the news of peace could make but slow progress. The consequent needlessness of this struggle at New Orleans may perhaps serve as a text for the advocates of peace.

It was in the autumn of 1814 that the rumor came of a threatened invasion from England, with New Orleans as the objective point. A fleet of some fifty vessels under Admiral Cochrane, with at least sixteen thousand troops and a thousand guns, duly appeared off the coast of Louisiana. The expedition was commanded by Sir Edward M. Pakenham, a veteran of the Peninsular wars, accompanied by General Gibbs, Keane, and Lambert, all soldiers of repute. Entering Lake Borgne on December 10, the British destroyed six American gunboats. The undefended city of New Orleans was thrown into a state of great excitement.

Meanwhile Jackson, fresh from his victories over the Creek Indians and recently appointed Major General of the Army, had arrived from Florida after a long horseback ride through the wilderness. He put the city under martial law and summoned troops from Baton Rouge, Tennessee, and Mississippi. The first skirmish took place two days before Christmas, six miles below New Orleans. A second engagement occurred on New Year's Day, behind the famous cotton-bale breastworks, the British using hogheads of sugar for defenses. But the decisive battle was still to come. After days and nights spent in vigorous building of earthworks, the dawn of the 8th of January found the two little armies grimly facing each other for the final struggle. Jackson's 4500 men were entrenched along the Rodriguez Canal.

The British attacked in several divisions, and for two hours the battle raged. But the deadly volleys from the American cannon and muskets played havoc with them. They fell by the hundreds. General Pakenham, riding from the rear to rally his retreating troops, received three shots and died in a few minutes; General Gibbs and Keane also fell. The British, thoroughly repulsed in the short but bloody battle,—left 700 dead upon the field and twice as many wounded. The entire American loss was 71. General Lambert, who had succeeded to the British command, decided to withdraw his troops to his ships, and on the 27th of January sailed away from the shores of Louisiana. Thus ended,—let us hope forever,—the appeal to arms between the United States and Great Britain.—From "The Final Battle," in the American Review of Reviews for January.

Hall-Ligon.

The announcement of the marriage of Mr. L. I. Hall, of Sebree, Ky., to Mrs. Ella Ligon, which was solemnized at Nashville last October, was made January 1. Mr. Hall holds a responsible position with the Imperial Tobacco Company here and spends most of his time here. His bride formerly lived at Robards but has been living at Russellville for a short time. Mr. and Mrs. Hall will make their home in Hopkinsville for the present.

Coughs, Cold Stiff Neck Neuralgia

Especially in the piercing pain of neuralgia or the dull throb of headache is Sloan's Liniment wonderfully relieving. Laid lightly on the part where the pain is felt, it gives at once a feeling of comfort and ease that is most welcome to the overwrought sufferer.

Hear What Others Say:

"There are no Liniments that equal Sloan's. My husband has neuralgia very often, he rubs Sloan's on his face and that is the last of it."—Mrs. V. J. Brown, Route 1, Box 121, Halls, Tenn.

"I have used Sloan's Liniment for family use for years and would not be without it. We have reared a family of ten children and have used it for croup and all lung trouble; also, as an antiseptic for wounds, of which children have a great many, it can't be beat. My wife sprained her ankle last summer and it was in bad shape. Sloan's Liniment applied enabled her to be as good as ever in a week. I have used it several times for sprains and rheumatism."—John Newcomb, R. R. No. 2, Koshuk, Iowa.

Marian Harland on Toothpicks

The appearance of the toothpick at table is a gross violation of polite usages. I have a disgusting recollection of seeing a millionaire taking out his false teeth at the conclusion of a dinner party and rinse them in his finger bowl. Yet the act was but a degree more objectionable than to extract a toothpick from one's pocket and coolly remove particles of food which are unpleasant to the eater. He should bear the annoyance rather than sicken the beholders by the sight of an operation which should be performed in the dressing room. As well bring a comb to the table to arrange hair and beard.

Kills Bird of Freedom.

Leo Pearson, a boy at Fayetteville, Tenn., killed a bald eagle measuring 6 feet 9 inches from tip to tip.

Forest Note.

Only 74 per cent of last year's 400 fires in national forests of southern Utah, western Wyoming and Nevada caused losses of $100.

Virginia uses more wood crates than any other state, followed by New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, and California, in the order named.

Those familiar with the eastern mistle only have no idea of the great losses due to this parasite in the forests of the west, where it counts next to fire and insects in the amount of damage done.

In parts of the west where trees are scarce, sage brush is used for fuel. In Nevada the large main stems are trimmed by Indians at $3.00 a cord and delivered to the user at about $6.50. Sage brush burns rapidly and is rather dirty, but produces good heat.

A log raft containing one million feet of cedar, said to be the largest ever floated on the Pacific, recently made the trip from British Columbia to Puget Sound. It was 100 feet long and 70 feet wide; it stood 15 feet out of the water and 20 feet under.

DEATH OF E. A. WILSON

After Illness of Several Months Well-Known and Popular Citizen Passes Away.

Death at 9:40 Sunday night claimed E. A. Wilson, one of the best-known and most popular young men in the city. The deceased had been suffering for several months from pneumonia and his death was not unexpected to the immediate family and personal friends. He left on March 3, 1914, going to Texas, in search of health. His condition gradually grew worse and he returned on Nov. 25 in order to spend the winter with members of his family. He was 37 years of age at the time of his death. He had been in the city for twelve months and was in the best of health when he left for Texas. He was a member of the Christian Church, and resided at the Hopkinsville, and had been in the city for a number of years. He later moved to Pembroke and from there came to this city nine and a half years ago. He was a traveling salesman, having held a position with the Belknap Hardware Company of Louisville, for eighteen years. He was held in high esteem by his company, it never forgetting him during his illness. He served a term as president of the T. P. A., of this State. He was of a sunny disposition, pleasant and congenial and made friends with all classes of business and professional men.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one brother, one sister and four little children, three daughters and one son. Following are members of the family surviving: Mrs. R. G. Lyles, wife of Howell; O. M. Wilson, a son of the same place. His children are Misses Laura Wilson, Mildred Wilson and Jean Wilson and Master David Wilson, all of this city. The remains were shipped to his home at Howell, Ky. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. F. Griffith and the interment was in the little family cemetery at that place.

Following were the pallbearers: K. Lockett, Leslie Clay, William Quinn, Pleasant Lambert, Monroe Cartfield and Hugh Farmer.—Herald-Journal.

SPORTSMEN IN NEW THRILL

Shooting of Flying Fish Said to Afford Much Pleasure to Those Who Like Such Things.

A novel combination of land and sea sport is the shooting of flying fish. It is a brand new sport and as yet has not spread beyond the Hawaiian islands. It is far more interesting than tarpon fishing or other supposedly thrilling sports, according to a New York man, as it requires a quick and accurate shot to bag fish and also one has to be an acrobat in order to maintain his equilibrium in the boat from which he fires.

To bag one fish from a school is considered a praiseworthy feat for an accurate gunner. Hunters who go in search of flying fish go in a trustworthy launch and are usually gone from early morning till night.

This interesting sport will never become common, because it is said that no one ever caught a flying fish with the intention of catching one. This is probably the best combination of land and sea sport known.

AUTO OWNERS LIABLE.

In a case before the supreme court of South Carolina the court ruled that when a father provides an automobile for the use of his family his agent when using the car for pleasure and the father is liable for the son's negligent use of it. In Guignon vs. Campbell the supreme court of Washington had the case of a married woman owning an automobile which her son used in driving a servant to a street car and ran over the plaintiff. The court said that though the mother was absent at the time of the accident and was not obliged to furnish her automobile for the use of members of her family the fact that she did so voluntarily made her liable in the case.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

EVIL IN MANIA FOR SPEED

One of the Greatest Defects in Modern Life is the Desire Always to "Move Along."

It is hurry in the morning, hurry at noontime and hurry at night. Nervous hodies wrought up to a certain speed, fret away pleasure and good nature just to keep up the pace. Relaxation becomes almost painful—rest a farce. To be in any measure content one feels it necessary to be rushing along breakneck. No more is accomplished, homes are not brighter, children the happier, or lives made more useful by all this rush. And yet we keep it up.

One has only to watch the crowds going to trains or cars to see the working out of the speed mania. Rights of others are forgotten, personal safety seems naught, just crowd, push and get ahead. And, strange to say, we do not get ahead as quickly as we would if we were to move in a leisurely manner.

Haste makes waste—we all know that. And waste is expensive in the extreme. Some persons are too busy to attend to that which insures themselves good health. They expect to mend a broken auto tire hastily and with no skill. This is an impossibility, but that is not taken into consideration.

And so the haste and waste go on, and some day comparatively young men and women let slip from their heads all that is useful and happy in life. Their grasp has grown weak and nothing can be held longer. All due to the daily rush of eating, of working, of walking—everything done hastily, with only a thought for saving an hour or two. In the long run it is all giving to rush and hurry. The average person knows this but doesn't care to give it too much thought. Think it over.

NO NEED TO TALK OF WAR

There Are Some Bigger Themes, Such as Professor Bateson has Recently Propounded.

As a diversion from war talk, Prof. William Bateson, the celebrated biologist, addressing the British association at Melbourne, proposes this theorem: "We must begin seriously to consider whether the course of evolution can at all reasonably be represented as an unpacking of an original complex which contained within itself the whole range of diversity which living things represent."

Perhaps if this issue had been clearly before the collective mind of Europe such minor matters as pan-Slavism and pan-Germanism might have faded into insignificance. Really, on the intellectual plane it is much more important. The war on Darwinism is being strenuously waged. Professor Bateson fights hard against the possibility of change in organic heredity being controlled from without. He asks whether it is not just as easy to believe that "the primordial form or forms of protoplasm could have contained complexity enough to produce the diverse types of life" as that "those powers could have been conveyed by extrinsic additions."

The trite saying, "It's a queer world," surely comes into one's head upon discovering that while millions of men, including Englishmen, are doing their best to kill each other in Europe, a great group of the best minds extant sit down calmly and gravely at the antipodes to discuss the secrets of life.

Effect Of One Bottle.

Crandall, Tex.—"After my last spell of sickness," writes Mrs. Belle Teal, of this city, "I remained very ill, and stayed in bed for eight weeks. I couldn't get up, all this time, and though my doctor came to see me every day, he didn't do me any good. I had taken but one bottle of Cardui, when I was up, going everywhere, and soon I was doing all my house-work." Cardui helps when other medicines have failed, because it contains ingredients not found in any other medicine. Pure, safe, reliable, gentle-acting—Cardui is the ideal medicinal tonic for weak, sick women. Try it.—Advertisement.

Didn't Quite Mean That.

A Scottish visitor to the Carlyles in Chelsea was much struck with the sound-proof room which the sage had contrived for himself in the attic, lighted from the top, and where no sight or noise from outside could penetrate. "My conscience, this is fine," cried the old friend, with unconscious sarcasm. "Here ye may write and study all the rest of your life, and no human being be one bit the wiser."

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH NO. 66.

Madison C. Forbes, Hopkinsville's Most Successful Business Man for 40 Years.

Forty-three years ago a big country boy left his humble home a few miles north of Hopkinsville and came to town to make his own way in life. His first work was in a cooper-shop making hogsheads. In the old days when all tobacco was prized in hogsheads and sold on the breaks. He soon became an expert hogshead maker and went into business for himself, finding a ready market for all of the hogsheads he could make. The great corporation that has grown from this small beginning is still making hogsheads at the same place, but the cooper-shop has long since become a mere side line of the gigantic business done by the Forbes Manufacturing Co., of which Madison C. Forbes is the head.

The growth of the business of Hopkinsville's, greatest commercial enterprise has been by a steady, uninterrupted increase from year to year. One by one new departments have been added, new buildings have been erected and new records of growth established.

From the original start with a cooper-shop and blacksmith's shop, the next step was to manufacture wagons and then the planing mill was the logical forerunner of the contracting and house-building department that has been the company's chief business. For many years the business was developed and carried on by the firm of Forbes & Bro. M. C. Forbes was always the dominant and forceful head of affairs. His brother, Jas. K. Forbes, was the mill man, his chief business being to supply the lumber needed for the firm's ever increasing demands. Jas. K. Forbes died about ten years ago, leaving no family, and his interests descended to his brother.

In January 1903, the firm of Forbes & Bro., was incorporated into two concerns, The Forbes Manufacturing Co., and the Mogul Wagon Co. Some outside stock was sold, but M. C. Forbes was made and still continues President of both companies and his strong personality has been behind every move made.

For many years Mr. Forbes' right hand man has been Geo. E. Gary, his brother-in-law, who has been closely identified with the company's management as the head of the contracting department and chief office man. Of late years Mr. Forbes' two sons, James M. Forbes and Wm. H. Forbes, have been taken into the business, learning the departments one after another, acquainting themselves with all the intricate details of what has become the biggest business enterprise in Western Kentucky.

In the early days of his business career, Mr. Forbes was fortunate in surrounding himself by several competent and trustworthy heads of the departments, who have become fixtures for a quarter of a century or more. Wm. A. Long, superintendent of construction; Geo. E. Randle, head of the tin department; Geo. W. Collins, head of the painting department, and F. F. Henderson, lumber department, have all grown gray in the service of the company. Of the 300 or more men now employed by the company, a great many have held their positions for 20 years or more.

The executive offices are on the corner of Eleventh and Main streets. Entering from the front, the first office on the right is occupied by Mr. Gary and further back Mr. Forbes himself is to be found, not in seclusion, but in constant touch with the business in all its details. On the left side the private office of Jas. M. Forbes is in front, communicating with the big room filled with book-keepers and stenographers, the great vault being beyond this. Down the aisleway, beyond the vault, there are other offices. One of these just opened this year is the law office, presided over by Henry J. Stites; the offices of the Mogul Wagon Co., recently removed from the Mogul plant a mile away to the central building, and still further back the tin, building and engineering office departments, all equipped for turning out business, each in a measure independent of the other. Back of these offices and on the floor above, are sales rooms and storage rooms for hardware, buggies and other goods.

In the block between Tenth and Eleventh streets, are located the hardware, grocery and jewelry departments fronting on Main street, while the planing mill occupies the Virginia street side, where Wm. H. Forbes is the head of the lumber sales department. These downtown centers are the points from which the business has extended all over town. Block after block has been added to meet the requirements of the lumber yard, the demand for room to handle hay, corn, coal, seeds, fertilizers, tiling, plumbing supplies, lawn swings and many other articles carried in stock or manufactured.

It would be a useless undertaking in this brief article to try to enumerate the various lines that have been incorporated into the business of this concern, that has been the life work of a Christian county boy who, though a Bethel College student, never had the advantage of a business training, but has succeeded by his own unaided efforts, guided always by the unerring instincts of a business man born for big things.

A distinguishing characteristic of this man, one that has marked each step of his progress, is that every dollar he has ever made has gone into buildings, into visible, taxable property, thus at the same time, building up the city of Hopkinsville, while adding to its revenues.

At 61 years of age, M. C. Forbes is in the prime of his career, robust and vigorous. He is a hard worker and not only in the day but nearly always until well into the night he can be found in his office receiving reports and planning for the future.

In every move looking to the progress and development of his city, he is always in the lead with his influence, his money and above all with his boundless energy that knows no such word as fail.

Mr. Forbes has been a member of every business or commercial club the city has ever had, but outside of business organizations, the only thing he belongs to is the Baptist church. He has never affiliated with any lodge or secret order, nor has he ever held a public office, except to serve a term or two on the city Council.

KENTUCKY CONGRESSMAN

Retained By Don P. Roberts In Prosecution at Indianapolis, Ind.

NATIONAL FAME AS LAWYER.

Indicted Mayor of Terre Haute, Places Reliance In Noted Kentuckian.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Mayor Don P. Roberts, of Terre Haute, announces that he has employed Representative A. O. Stanley, of Henderson, to defend him. The case is the most celebrated political contest now before any court. Mr. Roberts has been indicted for alleged violation of the Federal election laws, and the controversy involves the whole fabric of Democratic politics in Indiana.

Mr. Stanley will be the chief counsel in the case. He will go to Indianapolis January 15 to appear when the Federal Court hears arguments of demurrers to the indictment. These demurrers set forth that the Federal Court lacks jurisdiction to try the indictments. If the demurrers are quashed, the case will proceed to actual trial.

Mr. Roberts came to Washington to employ Mr. Stanley. He said he was attracted by the latter's great reputation as an advocate.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS.

The day of the civilian war correspondent seems to be over, and in future we shall have to be content with whatever news the commander of the forces, working through the censor's office at home, may think it wise to impart. It is highly improbable that officers who may have sufficient leisure to indulge in correspondence will be allowed to contribute to the public press, as they have done in smaller expeditions. During the second Ashanti campaign, for instance, two officers who distinguished themselves on that occasion, and have since attained a wider fame—Sir Edward Ward and Sir Robert Baden-Powell—acted as joint correspondents of the Daily Chronicle. They did so well that this journal was able to announce the fall of Coomassie two or three days before any other newspaper. There was a suggestion at the time that after the message the telegraph line to the coast had been mysteriously cut, but that, no doubt, was the result of professional jealousy.—London Chronicle.

FOOSHIE-BOGARD

Young Lawyer From Arkansas Wins Beautiful Trigg County Bride.

At the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Miller, near Golden Pond, the wedding of Miss Kitty Bogard and Mr. George Ernest Fooshee was solemnized at nine o'clock on the morning of Jan. 5, 1915. The ceremony was impressively pronounced by Rev. Mr. Travis, of Trigg county.

The couple were attended by Miss Lutie Baker, of Hopkinsville, as maid of honor and Mr. Hugh Miller, of Golden Pond, as best man. The music for the occasion was furnished by Mr. Cyril Miller on the violin, accompanied by Mr. Roscoe Foxgerson. They played various selections while the guests were assembling and Mendelssohn's wedding march as the wedding party advanced to their places, and continued to play very softly during the ceremony. The interior of the house was tastefully decorated in green and white and the wedding party stood under a beautiful arch of mistletoe.

The bride was lovely in a traveling suit of dark blue with fur trimmings and a hat to match. The maid of honor wore dark green and a large black hat. The men wore the usual black.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Fooshee drove through to Gracey, where they took the four o'clock train to Paducah. There they will make a short visit to relatives of the groom and from there will go to Hope, Arkansas, where they will reside.

The bride is one of Trigg county's most beautiful, talented and popular girls and is well-known in Hopkinsville, as she is a graduate of Bethel College.

Mr. Fooshee is a rising young lawyer from Colgate, Oklahoma.

Among the guests from a distance were Miss Fannie Baker and Miss Lutie Baker, both of Hopkinsville.

A number of handsome presents were received by the couple.

Brother Gives Blood.

Transfusion of blood from the veins of his brother, Forbes Wiley, was resorted to at Lexington to save the life of Dr. E. M. Wiley, a prominent physician. Improvement followed.

JAS. E. RICKETTS

Died January 5 At His Home on Jesup Avenue.

Jas. E. Ricketts died at his home on Jesup avenue, Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock, of a sarcoma tumor on his neck, from which he had been suffering for three years. He had been growing worse for a month and his critical illness preceded death ten days or two weeks, which time he was confined to bed and gradually sinking.

Mr. Ricketts was a son of John Ricketts, Sr., and was born in Christian county, June 5, 1863.

Most of his life of 52 years spent in Hopkinsville, though he was engaged in farming near the city. He was married to Miss Dora Blount about 15 years ago, who survives him. Two children born to him died in infancy.

Mr. Ricketts was a member of the First Baptist church but lived in the Second church and Rev. W. Goodman, pastor of that church, conducted his funeral service at the residence yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, assisted by Rev. E. P. Wilson, of the Christian church on West Side. The interment was in Riverside Cemetery.
